hacking cases and a misfeasance case for Gwent Police. Perhaps his most important recent outing was his representation of the Metropolitan Police in the Supreme Court in a case examining the policy of indefinitely retaining DNA. The Court found with a majority decision that the policy infringed Article 8 ECHR, but crucially did not order the destruction of existing samples, or the rewriting of the scheme” (Police Law) Chambers and Partners 2014

“Jason Beer QC, who “is very well known and is extremely good.” He is a defendant-only practitioner, who regularly works with government and public institutions. Beer is celebrated for handling inquiry work, and was counsel to the AI Sweady inquiry” (Public Law / Inquiries) Chambers and Partners 2014

“Jason Beer QC of 5 Essex Court who is “exceptionally bright” according to sources, who praise him for his technical ability, pragmatism, and proactive approach to his disciplinary work. He is often instructed in matters of alleged police misconduct” (Discipline) Chambers and Partners 2014

Background:

Jason practises in public law and police law. He took Silk in 2011. He is ranked as a leading practitioner in four practice areas in Chambers & Partners Guide to the Legal Profession. These are ‘police law for defendants’, ‘professional discipline’, ‘public inquiries’ and ‘administrative and public law’. In the Legal 500, Jason is ranked in ‘police law for defendants’ and ‘public inquiries’.

In relation to public law, Jason specialises in public inquiries and inquests, in claims arising from the operation of the criminal justice system, and in corporate manslaughter and health and safety investigations and prosecutions.

Before taking Silk, Jason was Junior Counsel to the Crown (Common Law – A Panel).

He is a Recorder on the South Eastern Circuit, and is Developed Vetted.

Jason acts in the full range of police law disciplines - in civil jury trials for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution, in misconduct proceedings and in inquests.

Jason studied at the Inns of Court School of Law from 1991 to 1992 and read law at the University of Warwick, from 1988 to 1991.

Police Law:

Jason appears in the full range of disciplines on behalf of the police service. He has been instructed by nearly all of the 43 forces in England and Wales.

He has appeared in a significant number of civil jury trials for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution and non-jury actions for assault. These are often ‘high profile’ claims where serious allegations of racism and / or corruption have been made.

Jason has also appeared in non-misfeasance claims involving the police service. He acted on behalf of the Attorney-General in the application for disclosure of police documents in the Madeline McCann case; and represented the Counter-Terrorism Command in the Omagh Bombing Trial in the High Court in Northern Ireland. For the past two years he has acted on behalf of the Metropolitan Police in the Phone Hacking claims.

He has acted and advised in over 250 discipline and misconduct cases. These have often involved complex misconduct investigations and substantial document intense, misconduct hearings. Jason has additionally acted as Legal Advisor to Chief Constables and Misconduct Panels in a large number of cases.

Jason Beer QC, 5 Essex Court

Appearing in many difficult and sensitive inquests involving the police service, Jason acts in inquests involving the deliberate use of lethal force by police officers (firearms incidents), suicides and other deaths in police custody. These might involve allegations of lack of care and deaths in road traffic accidents following pursuits by police vehicles. Jason was counsel for the Metropolitan Police Service in the New Cross Fire Inquest - a three month inquest into the deaths of 13 children at a birthday party in 1981.

Jason's public law practice frequently sees him acting on behalf of the police service in the Administrative Court. Cases have involved challenges to a policy on police cautioning, to disclosures made to the Criminal Records Bureau under the Police Act 1997. Also, from the use of ASBOs to combat prostitution, to the legality of investigations, arrests and searches conducted as part of Operation Ore.

Finally, Jason carries out a significant amount of advisory work on non-contentious police business. This is on operational and policy matters, in relation to sensitive and terrorist related issues. Additionally he has also provided advice on the operation of the Data Protection Act 1998 and the Freedom of Information Act 2000.

Public/ Administrative Law:

Jason is instructed in all areas of public law work. He specialises in claims that arise from the operation of the criminal justice system. He has particular expertise in corporate manslaughter and health and safety investigations and prosecutions - where experience in inquests, the criminal courts and in civil claims is essential. He appears on behalf of central government, other public authorities, including the police service, the Independent Police Complaints Commission, the prison service, coroners and for corporate clients.

Inquests:

As well as appearing in inquests themselves, Jason is often instructed in related proceedings in the Administrative Court.

He acts on behalf of coroners whose decisions and actions are challenged. He appeared on behalf of the Ministry of Defence in the Porton Down Inquest into the death in 1953 of a serviceman who acted as a "human guinea pig" testing the Sarin nerve agent.

He recently advised the Metropolitan Police Service on the public law aspects of the inquest into the 7/7 Bombings in London and represented the Parole Board in the Naomi Bryant Inquest.

Jason acted for the University of Manchester in three inquests into the deaths of academic staff who occupied the Rutherford Rooms at the University.

He is currently acting for Sheffield Wednesday Football Club in the Hillsborough Inquests.

Public Inquiries:

Jason has appeared in many of the most significant public inquiries of the last decade, mainly on behalf of central government or other public authorities.

He acted for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis in the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry and in the civil litigation that followed it, right up to the House of Lords: see Brooks v Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis [2005] 1 WLR 1495).

He appeared for a Government Department in the Harold Shipman Inquiry. Jason again appeared for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis – in the Zahid Mubarek Inquiry, into the murder of a young man in Feltham Young Offenders Institution.

Jason was Counsel to the Hearings, instructed by the Health and Safety Executive in the Public Hearings Touching on the Outbreak of Legionella in Barrow in Furness, an inquiry into the worst outbreak of Legionnaires' disease in the United Kingdom, in which seven people died and 172 others contracted the disease.

He was junior counsel for the family of Dr. David Kelly in the Hutton Inquiry.

Over the last two years, Jason has spent a significant period of time in Northern Ireland, appearing in the Billy Wright Inquiry and the Rosemary Nelson Inquiry. In the former, he led a team of barristers representing 92 former and serving prison officers and governors that had worked in HMP Maze at the time of the murder of Billy Wright. In the latter, he led a team representing the Northern Ireland Office.

He recently appeared in the Baha Mousa Inquiry, leading on behalf of a group of soldiers in connection with the death of an Iraqi civilian in Basra in 2003.

Jason has recently been appointed Counsel to the Al-Sweady Inquiry, an inquiry into allegations that British soldiers unlawfully killed and mistreated Iraqis in 2004.

He has written a book, called Public Inquiries, for the Oxford University Press, published in July 2011 as part of the OUP's "Practitioner Series".

Immigration:

Jason has appeared in a large number of cases at appellate level concerning immigration, nationality and asylum issues. These often involve issues of statutory construction, whose outcome affects a significant volume of applicants.

Lectures:

Jason provides CPD-accredited lectures to solicitors and others on all aspects of his practice. Recently he has lectured on tactics in defending claims for judicial review, corporate manslaughter, negligence claims against the police service, and the transition to Police and Crime Commissioners under the Police Reform and Social Responsibility Act 2011.

Interests:

Sailing and travel.

Significant work and cases

Jason's current case load includes:

- Acting for the Metropolitan Police Service in the David Miranda judicial review
- Acting for Sheffield Wednesday Football Club in the Hillsborough Inquests
- Counsel for the Commissioner of Police in the Goddard Inquiry
- Acting for the Metropolitan Police Service in the Phone Hacking Claims
- Acting for and advising Group 4 Security PLC in inquest concerning fatal shooting of employee in Iraq
- Acting for Surrey Police in the civil, regulatory and inquest proceedings arising from the Surry Puppy Farm Murders
- Acting for Devon and Cornwall Police in the investigations and proceedings arising from the death of Thomas Orchard
- Acting for Police and Crime Commissioner in IPCC independent investigation into a chief constable
- Acting for Surrey Police in relation to the investigations and proceedings arising from the death of Breck Bednar
